

Charles Terry: PCCM, research track

Why did you choose to train at Emory?

I chose Emory because I wanted to train in a public hospital and take care of the city's most vulnerable as part of my training. I am also from Georgia and wanted to be closer to home.

Hobbies/favorite thing to do in Atlanta?

Hiking in Sweetwater Creek with drinks afterwards on the beltline.

Fourth Year Fellows
2020-2021

Ian Wong: PCCM, research track

If you are in a specific track/program, what opportunities has your track/program given you?

As a research fellow, my opportunities have been amazing here. My mentors are Dr. Timothy Buchman and Dr. James Blum. With their mentorship, I have been able to rapidly do research in medical informatics and clinical decision support.

Hobbies/favorite thing to do in Atlanta?

My favorite thing to do in Atlanta is try out all the restaurants and bars – especially on Buford Highway! There are so many diverse options that you could spend all year trying new places and never repeat yourself. My next favorite? Ballroom / salsa / swing dancing – there are a ton of events all over (when corona clears up!).

Mohleen Kang: PCCM, research track

What's been your favorite fellowship experience?

My favorite clinical fellowship rotations have been Grady ICU nights, Advanced Lung Diseases (lung transplant and consults at the Emory University Hospital), and the Interventional Pulmonary rotation.

If you are in a specific track/program, what opportunities has your track/program given you?

The research track has let me pursue a Masters' of Science in Clinical Research and helped acquire skills in research design, ethics, scientific writing and statistical analysis. Fellowship has well prepared me for my transition into a faculty position.

Rich Ramonell: PCCM, research track

Why did you choose to train at Emory?

I chose Emory because after doing residency here I knew I wanted to continue working with people who I admired and helped make me the physician I am today.

Hobbies/favorite thing to do in Atlanta?

My favorite things in Atlanta are going to Piedmont Park – especially when the splash pad is open, walking the beltline, and watching the Gators win the SEC championship (this is DEFINITELY our year!).