SPOTLIGHTS
FACULTY SPOTLIGHT: Justine Welsh, MD
Justine Welsh is an Associate Professor and founding Director of the Emory Healthcare Addiction Services. She is also Medical Director of the Addiction Alliance of Georgia, a collaboration between Emory University and Hazelden Betty Ford Foundation. Justine completed a combined BS/MD program at Northeast Ohio Medical University, psychiatry residency at Emory and a child and adolescent psychiatry fellowship through Cambridge Health Alliance. She subsequently pursued an addiction psychiatry fellowship through Mass General Brigham. She returned to Emory shortly after her fellowships and developed our first adolescent addiction clinic prior to expanding to adult addiction services. The recently opened Emory Addiction Center now has a multidisciplinary team, OP/IOP services, fully operational lab and education/research programs.

Justine is a current MPI (Welsh/Hall) on an R01 through NIAAA investigating the implementation of screening, brief intervention and referral to treatment (SBIRT) for substance use in family planning clinics. For the last three years, she has served as an expert consultant to the CDC through an IPA agreement focusing on reducing addiction-related stigma and enhancing medical education. Justine is also Associate Director of a one-year intensive training program for primary care providers in addiction medicine at University of California, Irvine. Through this forum, she oversees twice yearly conferences, biweekly lectures and small group mentoring sessions. Outside of Emory, Justine is a co-chair of the Public Policy Committee for the American Academy of Addiction Psychiatry (AAAP), a member of the Advocacy Committee for the American Brain Coalition and was previously a Governor-appointed board member of Georgia’s Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities.
One of her most satisfying work-related achievements was when her co-edited book, Treating Adolescent Substance Use: A Clinician’s Guide, was released in 2019. Her most memorable work-related experience was submitting the JIT documents for her first funded R award, while driving to the hospital to deliver her first son. His middle name is now Grant, which RAS found very humorous. Justine most enjoys working as part of a team and participating in program expansion. Nothing in her day would be possible without the amazing team of people around her.

In the future, Justine is looking forward to continuing to expand services at Emory and partnering with Children’s Healthcare of Atlanta to identify ways to increase substance-related care for children with some of the highest needs.

Outside of work, Justine enjoys spending time with her husband Travis and two sons Knox (4) and Pierce (2). She also gardens and does home renovation projects. Justine enjoys traveling and has dual citizenship with Australia. Her youngest son’s middle name is Silverton, which is the name of the sheep and cattle ranch her mother’s family still owns and operates in Australia.

ADJUNCT FACULTY SPOTLIGHT: Nancy Chase

Nancy Chase, PhD, LCSW, is a psychoanalytic psychotherapist in private practice. She completed her training at the Emory University Psychoanalytic Institute and is now a psychotherapy faculty member at the EUPI. She has served as Chair and Co-chair of the EUPI Curriculum Committee, and as a member of the Executive Committee and Psychoanalytic Psychotherapy Program Committee. She teaches courses on psychoanalytic psychotherapy and on gender and sexuality at the EUPI. She most enjoys the opportunities these roles have offered her to connect with professional colleagues and contribute to the development of future generations of psychodynamic, psychoanalytic clinicians and academics.

Nancy’s clinical practice follows a thirty-year career in academia. She completed a PhD at Emory University’s Graduate Institute of the Liberal Arts (1984), where her study focused on reader response literary criticism, cognitive psychology’s text processing models and literacy education. She then took a faculty position at Georgia State University and eventually retired from GSU’s Department of English in 2013. During her academic career her clinically focused publications appeared in journals including The American Journal of Family Therapy, Alcoholism Treatment Quarterly, Reading Research and Instruction and among other work, she published two edited volumes on adult legacies of parentification phenomena.

Nancy’s study of family systems, the cultural, educational and gender diversities and psychodynamic family therapy inform her current psychoanalytic work with individual adults at various life stages. She has a keen interest in the psychology of the arts and creativity, and in the importance of examining our relationship with ourselves and others as essential to cultivating a meaningful, emotionally fulfilling creative life.
When not working, Nancy enjoys taking long walks and hiking, reading, writing and attending a wide variety of arts performances as they capture her interest and inspiration!

TRAINEE SPOTLIGHT: Alban Foulser, PhD

Alban Foulser is a postdoctoral resident, working with the Nia Project and Grady’s Obstetrics and Gynecology department to provide clinical services and conduct clinical research with a focus on women’s mental health and trauma. Within the Nia Project, she sees individual patients and runs groups on ACT for Chronic Pain, Cognitively Based Compassion Training and Grief. She also supervises students seeing individual and group therapy cases. Within Ob/Gyn, she sees individual therapy cases and run therapy groups for people experiencing perinatal mood and anxiety disorders through the Ob/Gyn outpatient clinic. Alban is also conducting clinical research focused on reducing the intergenerational transmission of trauma among Black mothers receiving outpatient Ob/Gyn services at Grady. She is also coordinating a research project focusing on using Motivational Interviewing to improve rates of outpatient mental health follow-up among patients hospitalized for psychiatric crises on Grady’s inpatient units. In addition to her clinical work and research, she is also a member of the Atlanta Behavioral Health Advocates (ABHA), as part of which she co-coordinates the submission process for ABHA’s Psychology Today blog, Outside the Box.

Outside of Emory, Alban also holds a part-time clinical position with the Anxiety and Trauma Clinic of Atlanta, where she is seeing patients with anxiety disorders, PTSD and OCD.

Alban loves the intersection of face-to-face connection with clients, the intellectual challenge of clinical research and opportunities to focus on social justice that clinical psychology provides. Forming close connections with her patients and witnessing their growth through therapy is especially rewarding for her.

Some of Alban’s most rewarding clinical experiences have been witnessing the impact on her patients of evidence-based treatments for PTSD. Within research, her most rewarding experiences have come from learning about shame, which was the focus of my dissertation, including deep dives into the literature and theoretical conversations with other clinical researchers.

Looking ahead to the future, Alban wants to continue providing individual therapy and conducting clinical research, with a focus on women’s mental health and trauma. One of her top career goals for this year is to learn more about her preferred balance of clinical work and research.

Outside of the workplace, Alban enjoys being active and outside. She especially loves running – she is part of Atlanta Run Club, and planning to run her sixth marathon at the Boston Marathon this spring. She also enjoys reading (mostly fiction), cooking and baking (most recently a German chocolate cake), traveling (she traveled to Ecuador this summer) and spending time with her partner, family, friends and dog Loki.

NEW FACULTY

Cristina Pritchett, MD – Cristina Pritchett is a board-certified psychiatrist who just transitioned from her geriatric psychiatry fellowship at Emory to a faculty position as an assistant professor of psychiatry. She is currently providing care in the geriatric outpatient clinic at the Brain Health Center, and collaborating with the neurology team in the movement disorders programs.

She is originally from Ecuador and attended medical school at the University of Azuay. She then completed her psychiatric residency in a New York state-operated psychiatric facility with training in multiple hospitals throughout New York City, including Creedmoor Psychiatric Center, Columbia University Medical Center and Zucker Hillside Hospital.

Throughout her training, she has been involved in multiple ECT projects including a NIA-funded multisite study for patients with severe agitation in moderate to severe dementia. She has also received research awards including the 2021 ISEN Trainee Travel Award and the 2023 AAGP Member-in-Training Research Award. Her primary interest is working to improve the quality of care provided to patients with mental illness along with the support provided to their loved ones, in particular, the underserved populations that cannot seek out and procure traditional care for themselves. She also has a burgeoning interest in neuropsychiatric disorders, psychopharmacology and neuromodulation and enjoys teaching medical students, residents and other trainees.

In her free time, she enjoys spending time with her husband, daughter and toy Maltese, as well as listening to podcasts, cooking, ice-skating and swimming.

WOMEN’S FACULTY DEVELOPMENT SUBCOMMITTEE

Wisdom from Women
The Women Faculty Subcommittee’s tips for ensuring equity at Emory.

TIP #5: Use inclusive language.
Language is powerful. Our language can communicate respect and make people feel included. If we are not careful, it can marginalize. Take care to use language that reflects people’s lived experiences and humanity and demonstrates a desire to ensure everyone feels valued and that they belong.

Inclusive Language is person-centered, gender neutral, non-ableist, open to change:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>SAY THIS</th>
<th>NOT THIS</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Hello everyone, Hi colleagues</td>
<td>Hey guys</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>They</td>
<td>she, he</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Typical</td>
<td>normal</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Underrepresented</td>
<td>minority</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Enslaved person</td>
<td>slave</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

“The words we choose and the language we use have the power to affect the people and the world around us.” -Amy Agarwal
“Language does not just describe reality. Language creates the reality it describes.” – Archbishop Desmond Tutu
