

PSYA- 330 ASSESSMENT/ANALYZABILITY

Fall 2020

Sybil Ginsburg and Laura Westen

Week One: Introduction

- a) Gabbard, Glen (2005). “Psychodynamic Psychiatry in Clinical Practice”. Fourth Edition. Chapter 3: Psychodynamic Assessment of the Patient (Pp.82-88).
- b) Wille, Robbert (2012). “The analyst’s trust in psychoanalysis and the communication of that trust in initial interviews”. Psychoanal. Q. 81:875-904.
- c) Frosch, Allan (2006). “Analyzability”. Psychoanal. Rev. 93:835-843.

Week Two: Beginnings

- a) Ehrlich, Lena (2004). “The analyst’s reluctance to begin”. JAPA 52:1075-1093.
- b) Smith, Henry (2004). “The analyst’s fantasy of the ideal patient”. Psychoanal. Q. 73:627-658.

Week Three: Selection

- a) Crick, Penny (2014). “Selecting a patient or initiating a psychoanalytic process?” Int. J. Psychoanal. 95:465-484.
- b) Ehrlich, Lena (2016). “Finding control cases and maintaining immersion: challenges and opportunities”. JAPA 64:983-1012.

Week Four: Clinical discussion/vignettes

- a) Levine, H.B. (2010). "Creating analysts, creating analytic patients". Int. J. Psychoanal. 91:1385-1404.

Week Five: Clinical discussion/vignettes

- a) Blackman, R. and Goldberger, M. (2016). "Will this case count? The influence of training on treatment". JAPA 64:1133-1152.
- b) Rothstein, A. (2006). "Reflections on the concept 'analyzability'". Psychoanal. Rev. 93:827-833.

Week Six: Clinical discussion/vignettes

- a) Poland, W. (2002). "The interpretive attitude". JAPA 50:807-826.