

Andrew Furman, MD

Introduction:

As the Associate Dean for Faculty Affairs in the Emory School of Medicine and a Professor and Eminent Physician in the Department of Psychiatry and Behavioral Sciences, I bring a unique balance to my professional life. I also serve as the Assistant Vice Chair for Faculty Development for Promotions, a small group advisor in the School of Medicine, and a provider of clinical care at Emory Healthcare. I hold leadership roles at the University and in national organizations, all while maintaining a focus on teaching, mentoring, and supervising.

Areas of expertise:

My clinical expertise relates to holistic approaches to clinical medical care, combining psychopharmacology and psychotherapy, and psychoanalysis. Academically, I am interested in medical education, the medical humanities and their pedagogic and developmental uses in the health sciences, and the professional and academic growth of physicians.

Relevant personal details:

I am a long-time and proud member of the Emory community. I am married to an Emory psychologist and have two young adult children.

Approach to mentoring and availability:

My approach to mentoring is rooted in a deep commitment to your growth and development. I strive to foster an academic mentor-mentee relationship that is characterized by mutual respect, open communication, and a shared dedication to your academic journey and career aspirations. I am here to provide guidance, support, and valuable feedback, helping you navigate the challenges and opportunities that come your way. Your proactive approach, receptiveness to advice, and dedication to your learning and professional goals are key to our shared success. In our collaborative environment, where ideas are freely exchanged, challenges are constructively addressed, and successes are celebrated, trust and honesty form the foundation of our relationship, creating a productive and enriching experience for both of us.
