

Raymond (Ray) Young MD, FACP

Introduction:

I am an Associate Professor of Psychiatry & Behavioral Sciences. I am Division Chief of Psychiatric Consultation Liaison Services for Emory Healthcare, Chief of Psychiatry for Emory University Hospital Midtown and Program Director of Emory's Consultation Liaison Psychiatry Fellowship Program. I divide my time between administration, clinical care and teaching.

Areas of Expertise:

My area of expertise is in the clinical subspecialty of consultation liaison psychiatry which focuses on management of the interface between medical and psychiatric illness. I have special interests in geriatrics, organ transplants & behavioral health, functional neurological disorders, delirium, catatonia, telemedicine in the inpatient consult setting and developing new models of consultation liaison services.

Relevant Personal Details:

I love spending time with my wife, son and extended family. I enjoy music, dancing and I am a big fan of Marvel and DC comic books, live action and animated films. I am also a big fan of Star Trek and Star Wars. I also consider myself an introvert and do enjoy spending some time to myself to reenergize.

Approach to mentoring and availability:

My approach is to listen and learn what is important to the individual and to provide advocacy and support for that individual's goals and interests. I try to be as available as the mentee would need.
